Newspapers Editorial Coverage at National Level (Thematic Distribution)

The indexed newspaper editorials present a broad thematic spectrum reflecting national concerns and policy discourse (Figure 1). The dataset encompasses diverse subject categories, illustrating the editorial priorities during the month of December 2025. Overall, the distribution demonstrates a clear inclination toward governance, political affairs, and environmental concerns, while cultural and social identity themes received comparatively limited attention. The thematic analysis indicates that Government emerged as the most prominently covered topic, with approximately 61 entries, signifying sustained editorial focus on governance structures, administrative policies, and state-level decision-making. This was followed by Politics with 43 entries, reflecting continued engagement with political developments, party dynamics, and democratic processes. The substantial attention given to these two themes underscores the policy-driven and governance-oriented nature of national editorial discourse. Environmental concerns ranked among the top themes, with Environment (35 entries) receiving notable attention. This suggests growing editorial sensitivity toward climate change, sustainability, and ecological challenges. Similarly, History, Archaeology, Geography & Travel (29 entries) and Current Issues (28 entries) demonstrate a balanced editorial interest in contextual, analytical, and contemporary national matters. Defence (26 entries) further highlights sustained concern with national security and strategic affairs.

Economic sub-sectors such as Banking and Finance with 21 items and Business FDI with 14 items further emphasize the media’s strong interest in financial stability, investment trends, and economic growth. These figures complement the high coverage of the broader Economy category, indicating layered and multidimensional reporting on economic affairs. Biography and

Autobiography with 17 items, while Women Rights, also at 16 items, reflects continued attention to gender-related issues within the national context. Science and Technology and Terrorism and Extremism each recorded 15 items, demonstrating balanced attention to innovation, technological advancement, and security concerns. Human Rights and Media and Journalism, each with 12 items, suggest ongoing engagement with civil liberties and press-related matters. War, Peace and Security appeared 9 times, indicating relatively moderate emphasis on conflict-related themes during the month.

Cultural and intellectual domains such as Language, Literature and Rhetoric, Comparative Religions, and Islam each recorded 8 items, while Health received 7 items and Agriculture and Arts each appeared 6 times. These figures show that although cultural, religious, and sector-specific issues were present in the media landscape, they did not dominate the national discourse. Accountability, and Kashmir Azad and Jammu Kashmir each recorded 5 items, suggesting limited but consistent attention to governance oversight and regional matters. Judicial Systems including references to the International Court of Justice appeared 3 times, Civil Service twice, and Ethnicity, Sports, Crimes, and Organizations each recorded only one item, indicating minimal coverage in these areas during December 2025.

Overall, the distribution of topics reflects a governance- and economy-centered news cycle, with strong institutional, policy, and administrative orientation. The month appears to have been characterized more by structured political and economic developments than by crisis-driven or event-specific reporting. The relatively lower frequency of sports, crime, and ethnicity-related coverage further reinforces the conclusion that December 2025 was primarily shaped by macro-level governance, economic management, and policy discourse within the national media landscape.

Newspaper Editorial Coverage at Global Level

The analysis of international coverage for December 2025 reveals a strong concentration on major global powers and geopolitically sensitive regions. The most prominently covered country was United States (36 items), followed closely by India Politics, Policies, Conflicts, Foreign Affairs (33 items). This indicates that global political and strategic developments involving these two nations significantly shaped international reporting during the month. Coverage of OIC, Islamic World Conflicts, and West vs Muslim World (24 items) reflects continued media focus on ideological, geopolitical, and conflict-related narratives involving Muslim-majority countries and Western powers particularly related to Gaza Genocide and Iran-US conflict. Similarly, China (23 items) received substantial attention, underscoring its growing global economic, political, and strategic significance. Together, the United States, India, China, and the Islamic world formed the central axis of international reporting, demonstrating that December 2025 coverage was largely shaped by power politics and cross-civilizational dynamics.

Broader thematic categories such as World Politics (20 items) and World International Relations and Foreign Policies (12 items) further confirm that global diplomatic movements, alliances, and strategic negotiations remained key subjects. Security-related themes were also prominently featured, including World Security (11 items), World Terrorism and Extremism (10 items), and World Conflicts (7 items). This pattern indicates ongoing global instability concerns, though not at crisis-level intensity. Coverage of World Nuclear Programs, Deals, CTBT, NPT, and IAEA (7 items) also reflects attention to arms control regimes and non-proliferation debates, suggesting sustained monitoring of global strategic balance.

Environmental and economic governance received moderate coverage. World Environment Protection Strategies (10 items) highlights growing international engagement with climate change mitigation and sustainability frameworks. Financial governance themes such as World Financial Institutions including IMF, World Bank, ADB, IBRD, and IDA (9 items) point to discussions on global financial stability, development financing, and economic restructuring. Meanwhile, World Economy (6 items) and World Business Opportunities (3 items) indicate attention to global markets and investment trends, though these were not dominant compared to geopolitical issues.

Social and developmental themes appeared with comparatively moderate frequency. World Social Issues (6 items), World Education Systems (3 items), and World Social Media (3 items) suggest coverage of societal transformations, educational reforms, and digital communication trends at the global level. Similarly, World Science and Technology (2 items) and World Power Resources and Natural Resources, including Oil (2 items) reflect limited but present attention to innovation and energy security matters.

Institutional and multilateral dimensions were less prominent but still visible. Coverage of World and Regional Organizations such as the UN and UNESCO (2 items) and World Human Rights, NGOs and IGOs (1 item) indicates relatively lower emphasis on multilateral institutional frameworks. Health-related matters received minimal attention, with World Health Related Issues (1 item), suggesting that December 2025 did not witness a major global health crisis driving international headlines.

Overall, the distribution of topics demonstrates that international coverage in December 2025 was heavily geopolitically oriented, with a strong focus on major powers and strategic alignments. The dominance of the United States, India, China, and the Islamic world reflects a power-centered narrative structure in global reporting. Security, nuclear policy, and ideological tensions were more prominent than developmental, educational, or humanitarian themes. Economic and environmental governance maintained moderate visibility, while global institutions, health, and human rights received comparatively limited coverage. This pattern suggests that the month's international news agenda was shaped primarily by strategic competition, diplomatic realignments, and security concerns rather than social or humanitarian crises.
